RCIA is a process through which men and women of different faith traditions are received into the full communion of the Catholic Church or are initiated through the sacraments of Baptism, Confirmation, and Eucharist. Do you have a friend, family member, co-worker, or neighbor who has expressed an interest in our faith? If so, please invite him/her to call Kathleen Rooney (203-762-9080) or one of our priests (203-762-3928) to learn more about joining a group of parishioners on a weekly basis to reflect on Scripture, discuss the teachings of the Catholic Church, and pray together.

RECENT CATHOLIC RESEARCH done by the Catholic Bishops Committee on Evangelization states that most Catholics who have left the active practice of their faith cite a variety of reasons: They did not experience the presence of God in their faith community; They were hurt by clergy or lay Catholics; They were in marriages not recognized by the Church; They were easily misled by those who attacked the Church. If you know an adult who would like to talk about coming home to his/her family of faith, please invite him/her to call one of our priests at 203-762-3928 to talk in confidence about these or other issues. We want to be whole again.

JESUS, GRACIOUS GUEST

Jesus goes to a wedding, and at his mother's request some-what reluctantly changes water into wine. Only in John's Gospel, presented in his Book of Signs (1:19 — 12:50), do we find this event, so we suspect this is more than the act of a gracious guest. Or perhaps that is exactly what it is on the most profound level.

INSIDE THE READINGS

The Gospel reading today recounts the first miracle of Jesus in the Gospel of John. In this Gospel the miracles are called "signs" because they witness to who Jesus is.

This first miracle changes water into wine at the wedding feast at Cana. It portrays Jesus as the ample provision for the spirits of his disciples no matter in what situation they find themselves. The Johannine Christians appear to have been cast out of synagogue fellowship (John 9:34; 12:42; 16:2). We should not minimize the psychological effects of this expulsion because humans are social creatures through and through. Ostracism cuts to the very heart of our social needs. The first sign of Jesus addresses this most basic psychological need for the joy that comes through human companionship. When wine has run out at the wedding, Jesus changes water into wine (John 2:3-10). The rest, refreshment, and celebration may continue. If the commitment of the disciples to Jesus separates them from their larger society, they need not worry. Jesus gives them the wine that is often symbolic of joy both in the Old Testament and in other ancient Mediterranean writings. At the same time, Jesus provides his disciples a new perspective on the social sufferings they experience, a perspective that also sustains them in troubling times. The response of Jesus to his mother when she notifies him, "They have no wine," is "Woman, how does your concern affect me? My hour has not yet come" (2:4). Jesus' "hour" is a reference to the time of his death. So while Jesus does change the water into wine, thus prolonging the joy of the wedding feast, he seems to be strangely unconcerned with the matter because of his focus on his hour. This puts into perspective the concern for present sufferings and the joy that God provides in the midst of them. There is something even more joyful to which all suffering leads.

THOUGHTS FOR ACTION

Pray over the words of the prophet Isaiah, speaking in God's name, in today's first reading: "As a young man marries a virgin, / your Builder shall marry you; and as a bridegroom rejoices in his bride / so shall your God rejoice in you" (Isaiah 62:5).
